

WORKSPACE BINGO

Lean into your power as Sovereign of your workscape!

If you see it, do it, feel it or hear it, cross out a block.

I respond constructively when consulted about changes in the culture and workings of my current gig.	I read my Employment Contract, and I understand and agree to all that is in it.	I acquire useful resources that I like and want, to do my work well.	I know what value I want to consciously contribute to my current gig right now.
I use my voice to express my thoughts about work conditions and relationships.	I know my own critical values and find useful values alignment with an employer organisation.	I negotiate with my Manager about creating value for self as part of work/ team activity.	I am confident in my understanding and accountability to the Position Description I work under.
I identify a personal set of trusted advisors for guidance in employee-employer relations.	I develop a reputation that embraces a full version of me, and take steps to let others know how I can be of service.	I evaluate feedback I get about my work and performance and decide what is important for me to attend to.	I shape the terms and conditions that I want and value, in order to do my work well.
I pay for learning activities that will advance my interests beyond a current gig or role, and beyond this year.	I believe in my right and ability to be the Sovereign of my workscape.	I make and have diverse relationships that enrich my whole workscape, within this gig and beyond it.	I get advice from an Employment Lawyer when needed to help me make useful decisions.
